VOL. VII.....NO. 2169. NEW-YORK, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1858. PRICE TWO CENTS.

Yesterday New-York celebrated—and in a manner that will long be remembered—the wondrous event of a wondrous age. We were all prepared for an enthusiastic jubilee in honor of the Ocean Telegraph. We anticipated an unrivaled display; but the enthusiasm far surpassed our expectations, and the display was such as even New-York has never witnessed within its broad limits. Heaven and earth were smiling and propitious, and the rays of the early September sun shorn of their fierce heat by the hazy mist that hung over the Metropolis, were genial and pleasant.

The City awoke at an early hour, and along Broadway, as soon as it was light, the noise of hammers and other significant sounds of preparation might be heard without intermission. As the morning advanced the street gradually assumed a holiday appearance, and was soon decked out in all the colors of the rainbow. Wherever a piece of bunting could be conveniently hung, there it might assuredly be seen. Transparencies, mottoes, proverbs and old saws of all sorts, of all sizes, and of all designs, were displayed in the sunlight.

It was singular to read some of the designs, and discover from them the tastes and dispositions of their proprietors. Some displayed texts of scripture to edify the reader and improve the occasion; some would not, or would not, lose so splendid an opportunity to advertise their goods, wares and merchandize; some were rigidly scientific, and announced in large letters how they rejoiced in the progress of the Age; some again supported men in contradistinction to things inanimate, and ornamented their dwellings with the imperishable names of FIELD, MORSE, and EVERETT; others lost sight of everything else in the great event of the century—that great event to which yesterday was wholly and solely dedicated. Indeed, each mind very generally illustrated their own feelings on the fronts of their stores and dwellings. Some took the matter with awful seriousness, and looked upon the Ocean Telegraph, purely and simply as the stupendous scientific triumph that it actually is, others looked at it more materially, and in their representations of the officers present and prospective of the telegraphic union between Europe and America, displayed the most extravagant caricatures. But one motive actuated all. The Jubilee was universal.

From the earliest hour of the morning all the approaches to the City were pouring streams of human beings to upon the metropolis. The ferry-boats were crowded to excess, all the boats that could be mustered were put on, and trips were made with unusual frequency. The early and indeed the late trains over the New-Jersey, Long Island, and Northern roads were crammed past all precedent. The carriages were were one long cloud of dust from the fences and hedges miles out into the country in all directions.

And the view of the harbor, the shipping and the City seen from the water was never so gay. Every mast or flagstaff that would hold a flag, bore its bunting, and every ship or snow, or description of float flew thing that ranges between the two, and would not sink under the weight, lifted a mast or flagstaff. Flags of all nations and in all conditions of repair were displayed, so that the City even in the extreme distance looked like some island of bunting entirely canopied with gay colors;—seen from the top of Trinity, Broadway was paved with the hats of men and the sidewalks for straightened relations. Fulton and Cortlandt and Chambers streets were packed with a slowly moving throng. Later in the day Broadway from the Battery to Canal-street to see immense cavalcade, while the streets that crossed it for a block each way were blue with the crowd.

There was a pretty general suspension of business, the stores being almost universally closed, the banks keeping open for a brief time only, the public offices formally opened only for an hour in the morning, the newspapers refraining from evening editions.

The idler who could afford to lounge down Broadway about 10 o'clock yesterday morning—as who could not?—would have enjoyed many a laugh at the eager curiosity of those who sought to decipher the strange displays that greeted them on every side. The sidewalks, even at that hour, were so densely thronged that it was impossible to move on at anything like a business pace. All the world of New-York, in fact, were waiting to see the great procession, and they had come out thus early to secure good places to see the show. But while they are waiting, and we are waiting, to see the procession, it may not be out of place to introduce here a more detailed account of

The Appearance of Broadway.

From the top of the Astor House the English and American flags were flying, and in front, over the entrance, were placards bearing the following inscriptions:

"The Age of Progress. 1858."
"Lightning Under the Ocean."
"Steam on the Erie Canal."

"The Atlantic Telegraph transmits the lightning of Heaven, and binds together 60,000,000 human beings speaking the same language, and worshipping the same God."

On the City Hall flags were flying. Surmounting the centre of the roof, was a painting representing the national bird with wings outspread, standing on a shattered and striped shield, as if just lighted there, with the fire and the American standard under his right talons, and the English standard and unicorn under his left wing. Under this was the name of FRANKLIN in large letters, and on the one side the coat of arms of the State of New-York, and on the other, the coat of arms of the City of London. On smaller placards to the right and left, were the names which have become famous in connection with the Telegraph.

The West, East and South gates of the Park were ornamented by inscriptions as follows:

WEST GATE—FRONT.

Printing Press, Electric Machine.
"The path of FRANKLIN led to a FIELD of enterprise;" on the other side, "Peace hath her victories, no less renowned than war."

SOUTH GATE—FRONT.

Wisdom, Shield, Buchanan, Shield.
"The Trinity marriage, united in the bonds of peace and unity Aug. 5, 1858;" on the other side, "Although to Columbus, Hudson to History, FIELD to fame belongs, God hath joined together let no man put asunder." On the other side, "There is a path which no fowl knoweth, and which the vulture's eye hath not seen, the lion's whelps have not trodden it, nor the fierce lion passed by it."

The establishment of BALL, TOMPKINS & BLACK No. 247 Broadway, was splendidly decorated.

There was a transparent arch (spanning the whole front of the building,) extending two feet above the large gilt eagle, of which was painted,

"The Atlantic Telegraph Cable."

Another transparency under the Arch, bore the inscription,

"Projected" "Completed"
1854. Aug. 5, 1858.

And under this,

"Honor to Cyrus W. Field."

Over the door was another transparency, with the inscriptions, "England" and "America," with a male and a female hand clasped between the two words.

Suspended from the Eagle on the top of the building, was a portion of the Telegraph Cable, festooned to the American and English flags. On one end of the Cable was a transparency, on which was painted, "Appomattox," and on the other side, "Niagara" was written.

On the principal flagstaff floated a beautiful silk flag, white ground, with a representation of Neptune in his Car, drawn by six horses. Around the front and sides of the building waved the flags of all nations.

The clothing store of D. DEVLIN & Co. corner of Broadway and Warren-street, was decorated with small, varied-colored flags. Over the first story, between the National Standards of England and the United States, was written "Thunder and Lightning!! The Telegraph Lightning is 'Our Thunder.'"

The jewelry store of ROSSER RAY, northwest corner of Broadway and Warren-street, was decorated with flags of England, Scotland, Ireland and America, and was brilliantly illuminated at night. The only transparency was one bearing the rose, thistle and shamrock, with the word "Union" between them.

The dry-goods store of BOWEN & MCNAMEE, corner of Broadway and Pearl-street, was alive with small flags of all nations. In the windows were the following inscriptions: "America to all Nations. E Pluribus Unum." "Europe and America. Blest be the tie that binds." "New-York and London one city." "Niagara and Agamemnon. Hudson and Preedy." "Directors of the Atlantic Telegraph Company. Their monument lies low." "The Atlantic Cable, the Necklace of the World."

Over the clock store, in front of H. SPERRY'S establishment, No. 338 Broadway, "Time Works Wonders" was placarded.

At No. 343 Broadway, was the following:

"Honor to those whose genius led
The lightning's track through ocean's bed,
A path for thought;
And kindred honors may they share
Who sweet relief from toilsome care
For Woman wrought."

The building, the depôt of the Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine Manufacturing Company, was decorated with flags of various nationalities. On the right of the transparency was written the word "Past," and on either side of it were representations of a courier on horseback, a mower mowing, a woman toiling at her needle, a canoe propelled by hand, and a hand and pen writing; on the left side was the word "Present," with a mowing and reaping machine, Telegraph wires, a woman working with a sewing machine, a printing press and a steamboat.

At No. 345 Broadway was the following inscription:

Through ocean's desolation deep
Thoughts in "electric fire" sweep—
The "Friendly Nations" converse hold
Through its caverns dark and old.

"Noble theme," in waves of song
Roll triumphant notes along—
"Fairy's laurel" decks a Saxon brow—
Our country's FIELD is victor now.

A large painting covered two stories of the front of GURNEY'S Daguerreotype Gallery, No. 349 Broadway. It represented an eagle on one side and a lion on the other, with the cable stretching through the sea between them. In the centre, on a rock, was a female form with outspread wings dominant over commerce and the arts. Above on either side was written, "VICTORIA," "BUCHANAN." Below was this inscription: "CYRUS W. FIELD, DAGUERRE and MORSE. The one harnessed the light, the other the lightning. May the 'continuity' of the cable be as perpetual as the rays of the sun." To the left of this was, "Captain PERRY, Agamemnon," and to the right, "Captain HUDSON, Niagara."

From the gilded eagle that ornaments the fourth story of the establishment of JAMES, BOGERT & Co., No. 356 Broadway, streamers hung. From the first floor a temporary balcony projected with a front of canvass, rows of upright muskets with candles stuck in the barrels, and the couplet,

"The cable with its peaceful tricks
Mazes of muskets candle sticks."

The whole front of No. 358 Broadway, (BRADY'S,) the lower part of which is used as a dining saloon and the upper stories as a photographic gallery, was decorated with a splendid transparency 50 by 25 feet. Above on the top the words "Science, Labor and Art—Union Cable."

On the right was a portrait of FIELD, in the centre one of FRANKLIN, and on the left one of MORSE. Beneath were two female figures representing America and England joining hands, while to the right of these and below was a steamship with the emblems of mechanism and science, and to the left a sailor from the Niagara. Under this was a bridge joining two countries, and beneath this again was a figure of Neptune chained, implying that his power was at an end. To the right was the letter B and to the left the letter V, both surrounded by electric stars. The whole design was well conceived and beautifully executed, and was got up entirely by the employes of Mr. BRADY. It attracted a great deal of attention.

TAYLOR'S International Hotel, Nos. 365 and 367 Broadway, bore the same huge inscription which has been there since the day of the first celebration. We have already published it.

MESSRS. SOLOMON & HART'S store, No. 369 Broadway, bore a huge painting, representing the laying of the cable, with the letters "M." "F." "H." at the top, and beneath, "Europe and America united by telegraph." "Glory to God in the highest, on earth peace, good will toward men," "BUCHANAN," "VICTORIA."

Florence Hotel, corner of Walker-street and Broadway, was decorated with colored lanterns, and flags and small transparencies, bearing the names of the distinguished men who were connected with the submarine telegraph enterprise.

The front of GIBSON'S Gallery of Decorative Art, Nos. 374 and 376 Broadway, was tastefully arranged with the flags and emblems of England and America during the day. There were large transparencies. On the central one, headed were two figures representing England and America, in the persons of John Bull and Brother Jonathan, the Cable uniting their two hearts, after the manner of the twins of Siam. These figures were well drawn and very characteristic. Under their feet was the following verse:

The brothers need no bulwarks,
No towers along the steep;
Our march is on the mountain wave
Our lightning through the deep.

On the left was another large transparency, representing two first-class ships of war engaged in deadly strife. Under the sea of blood are represented, not the glories, but the realities of war—hundreds of human beings were seen sinking as a chain of death. The background represented the Demon of Destruction. This picture was simply described as the "Past."

To the right was a companion picture called the "Present." This was represented by the Niagara and the Agamemnon engaged in the peaceful laying of the Cable, emanating from which sparkles in electric fire, the words—"Peace on earth to men of good will." The back-ground represented the hand of God assisting in this wonderful work—with the words of Captain Hudson: "God has been with us."

E. LYON & Co., No. 42 Broadway, had a fine transparency in front of their building. The letters "E," "V" were at each of the upper corners; at the bottom corners were the English and American shields In the middle was the following:

"Morse, Field and Hudson—three noble names,
Have made all nations the United States."

Below this were the Niagara and Agamemnon laying the cable:

"Europe from these United States
The sea no longer separates."

H. DARBONVILLE, No. 445 Broadway, had a fine transparency. On the top was written "XIX Century;" on one side, the names of C. W. FIELD, Hudson, DAYMAN and EVERETT: on the other side, the names of WAITE, FULTON, SUPERNESON and MORSE. Below is the Cable, resting on New-York and London, with the word "United" over it, with the Niagara and Agamemnon in the distance.

The City Assembly Rooms, which were hired and decorated by the Young Men's Democratic Union Club for the occasion, presented an imposing appearance. It was profusely decorated with the flags of all nations. Outside were three pedestals, that on the right bearing a statue of MORSE, that on the centre one of FRANKLIN, and that on the left one of FIELD. In the centre, extending along the whole front, was a piece of canvas, on which was written: "The Atlantic Telegraph: An artery through which the living blood of Liberty shall be infused through all nations over the sea."

On the new building of the BROOME BROTHERS, corner Grand and Broadway, was a transparency with a female figure on each end. Britannia with the English flag on the right, and an Indian woman with the American flag on the left. Above was the following motto:

"The Great Event of our Day—Commenced in Faith, pursued in Hope; may it be a bond of Charity and Good Will between Nations."

Under the above inscription were the Niagara and Agamemnon laying the cable, and between them a shield bearing the arms of England and America, surmounted by a "Spread Eagle." The effect was very fine.

E. V. HAUGHWOUT & Co.'s Corinthian Iron Building, with its enormous front on Broome-street and Broadway, opposite the St. Nicholas Hotel, presented a most brilliant appearance, furnishing, as it does at one view, over 100 large windows, each with sixteen variegated colored lights, and nine plate glass show-windows, illuminated each with 175 gas jets, forming a star of three feet in diameter. The exterior front of this magnificent palace of merchandize was illuminated in a most becoming and tasteful manner, an arch of variegated gas-lights, spanning the Broadway front, being divided in the centre, at the top, by illuminated stained-glass hands, clasped; and over the right arm of the arch, in colored glass lights, were the words "United States;" and on the left arm the words "Great Britain," representing the two countries with their arms spanning the space between them, and the hands clasped in friendship. Over the centre of the grand arch was a stained-glass likeness of FRANKLIN, the discoverer of electricity. On the right was the likeness of CYRUS W. FIELD, whose energy and perseverance were instrumental in laying the cable; while the large clock in the front of this was encircled by a wreath of colored lights. On the top of this palace was waving, in the centre, the American flag; on the right, the British flag; and on the left the French flag, with the long pennant floating in the air, even beyond the opposite side of the street. The whole of this illumination was most magnificent.

The St. Nicholas displayed on the roof the Union Jack and the American flag. There were two gigantic transparencies in front, one representing a very shy old gentleman in black, shaking hands with a middle-aged lady in white satin, bearing on her head a monstrously huge crown. They meet on the beach, two ships are in the middle distance, and underneath is the word "Reciprocity." The other transparency is a caricature of Jonathan and Juan Bull, each hold of the end of a piece of the cable. On the ground floor is a better executed device: "United forever—peace blesses the Union;" "Telegraph Lines are the Nerves of Nations;" "The Queen and Old Buck perform a new feat on the slack rope;" "I'll put a girdle round the earth in forty minutes."

The Prescott House displayed a flag on its roof.

The Chinese Buildings showed the American flag.

Waterbury's Upholstery saloon bore a large transparency thus inscribed: "Rejoice, all nations. Married, on Thursday, Aug. 5, 1858, in the Church of Progress, at the altar of Commerce, the Old to the New World. May they never be divorced." "Born, on Monday, Aug 16, 1858, in the bed of the Ocean, of Science and Enterprise, the child 'Atlantic Telegraph.' May it live to honor its parents." "Died, Monday, Aug. 16, 1858, from an electric shock, Old Fogyism. May he rest in peace."

The St. John's House displayed a motto: "Genius and Perseverance have caused both ends to meet."

The Metropolitan Hotel, over the front of the balcony of the portico had hung in folds the flags of several European Powers. The Union Jack was placed on the centre of the roof, and at each end the American ensign. The whole front was decorated with a magnificent display of Chinese lanterns. The building is five stories, with 30 windows on each floor. Sixty cylindrical lanterns were run on immediately below the edge of the roof. 30 spherical lanterns in the face of the front, and a corresponding row of cylindrical lanterns over the plinth of the second floor windows, the general effect, even by daylight, being very picturesque.

Niblo's Garden had over the portico the Union Jack and American flag with the lyre of Terpsichore in dead white; transparency inscribed, "When the multitude saw it, they marveled and glorified God that such power was given unto men."

Messrs. J. & L. BRIGHAM, under the architrave had the word "FRANKLIN," and the front of the building neatly festooned in horizontal folds of blue, red and white drapery. Over the window of the first floor was a screen inscribed, "Glory to God in the Highest, Peace on Earth, Good Will to man." Over the the twelve windows, the names of those who have signalized themselves in the enterprise.

The Smithsonian House had its balcony festooned and inscribed. "Let all nations of Christendom spontaneously unite in the declaration that it shall be for ever neutral, even in the midst of hostilities."

Maillard's Hotel and Restaurant displayed over 800 lights upon the front; the windows were ornamented with pyramids, intercolumniated over the façades, and a brilliant star in the centre.

Laura Keen's Theatre and Hotel displayed a well painted scene, the Niagara laying the Cable, the whole front decorated with Chinese lanterns, and over the portico an emblematical device of England and America, with the motto, "British Neighborhood, Human Brotherhood, Divine Fatherhood."

Sharren's Upholstery Warehouse had a transparency inscribed "Eternal friendship," the Union Jack and American flag. Jonathan is throwing a coiled line, exclaiming, "Only a Yankee Notion." John Bull is saying "My Eyes, Jonathan."

Burton's Theatre displayed the American and English colors and a transparency with this professional and appropriate motto: "Smile Heaven! upon this fair conjunction. Enrich the time to come with smooth faced peace, with joyous plenty, and fair prosperous days!"

The Lafarge House had over the porch a well-painted large transparency of a sea fight; underneath: "Severed July 4, 1776; United August 12, 1858." On another strip, 20 yards long, were these words: "Science controls the elements, binds together with an iron cord the ends of the earth, and, guided by wisdom, man writes his thoughts with the lightning's point."

The house of GUIDO MARSINI, 683—of Messrs. Pierce and others, 693 and 695, and the Waverley, corner of Tenth-street, were profusely supplied with Chinese lanterns.

The New-York Hotel displayed a large transparency: A bull is held by his owner by the horns; across the water Jonathan has a sort of windlass and a line attached to the bull's tail. In the centre sits an Irishman on a rock, exclaiming, "Pull away, Jonathan—if the tail houlds on, ye'll fetch 'em." John Bull exclaims, "I'm afraid it's all up with us; the Yankee's got us." To which Jonathan replies, "Keep cool, and I'll annex you both." Then at the bottom is inscribed "Extending the area of Freedom."

The whole line of Broadway was frequently broken by inscribed banners, extending across the street, flags and streamers of every hue, and forming, before the evening illumination commenced, a very gay display along the long thoroughfare.

From the store of CHARLES HOARE, No. 629 Broadway, a banner was hung forth, beneath which was written "Perseverance conquers."

The Spingler Institute, on Union Square, was decorated with small flags, and a placard bearing the inscription, "The Spingler Institute. The daughters of America send greeting to the daughters of England."

Many other buildings, in various parts of the city, were decorated almost as splendidly as those which we have mentioned.

Broadway never was so gaily dressed before. Flags and streamers and vari-colored Chinese lanterns adorned nearly every other building; on hundreds were hung banners and huge paintings, with inscriptions in honor of the occasion; across the streets at intervals placards were swung; many windows were filled with gas jets and rows of candles ready for the illumination of the evening; and all the street, and the other streets through which the procession passed were crowded with men, women and children in holiday attire, adding not a little to the vivacity of the scene.

A grand allegorical painting, representing Neptune protecting the Atlantic cable, was displayed by the German Liederkranz Society in front of Pythagoras Hall, corner of Bowery and Canal-street.

In front of the photographic establishment Nos. 422, 424 and 426 Broadway, was a colossal photograph of CYRUS W. FIELD, on a scale of about 25 feet for the full length figure.

Reception of the Heroes at the Battery.

People began to gather upon the Battery as early as sunrise, and by ten o'clock, all the vacant ground in this part of the City was full. The immense congregation found that it was yet early in the day; moreover there was nothing for them to do but to stick by their places, and gaze at the shipping at anchor. The United States frigate Sabine lay at anchor within three hundred yards of the Battery; a large American ensign floated at her peak, a small one at the mizzen, still another at the main, and the English jack flaunted at the fore. Her guns were run out ready for a salute. Those who did not know better regarded her with great admiration, under the impression that she was the frigate Niagara, as the Committee of Arrangements had announced that this heroine of the sea and of the occasion would be there. With the arrival of the military, the thousands already on the ground were squeezing into every nook and corner. The sun poured down its intensest rays, the soldiers sweltered, men wiped the perspiration from their brows, and loafers elbowed nurses with babes in arms to get possession of the few shady patches that could be found. About the only comfort there was, consisted in feasting the eyes upon the sight of the supposed Niagara, and the lines of the Sabine and the genius of Strauss were loudly praised until it got about that they were sold, and that the Niagara still lay in tar and dishabille at the Navy Yard.

Still though that was not the Niagara, everybody wondered when the Niagara would appear, according to the unerring announcement of the programme. Those posted, however, were no less anxiously looking for the English officers, Capt. Hudson and Mr. FIELD, and no less in a quandary which way to look for them. At half-past one P. M., a salute from the Sabine announced that somebody was coming. The steam tow-boat, Isaac P. Smith, was observed coming down the North River towards the Battery; the extra quantity of bunting displayed indicated that somebody unusual was on board, and, when she fired a salute from her forward deck, it was made sure. She stopped alongside an emigrant barge, and the heroes of the Atlantic Cable appeared at the gangway. The Sabine boomed away from both broadsides, as the gallant officers stepped ashore and walked in procession through the old building. Captain DAYMAN looked a little surprised at the squads of Irish immigrants scattered through the place, who were regaling themselves on loaves of bread and chunks of cheese. Hats, boots and bonnets, hung in festoons upon clothes lines strung around the room. The heroes passed out of the Garden and across the delicious lawn in front (lately been filled in with City filth and the waste coal ashes) to the position assigned them in the procession, the band playing lively airs. They took seats in carriages provided for them, and awaited the moving of the procession. Not one in ten on the Battery observed their landing, or were cognizant of the fact. Thousands stood still, gazing out into the East River for the appearance of the Niagara, and were immensely disappointed when it became known long afterward that the heroes had actually landed. Mr. TAYLOR, the Superintendent of the Telegraph, was running from one point to another in pursuit of Mr FIELD, having a handful of messages directed from London to deliver to him.

SCENE AT THE MAYOR'S OFFICE.

Policemen in uniform stood outside the door leading to the Mayor's, and prevented an early rush of visitors inside. Victims of ticket swindlers, faro banks and mock auctions, wives whose eyes had been blackened and heads damaged by their brutal husbands, and representations of the usual daily heterogeneous class of complainants presented themselves to have their wrongs righted. They were all sent away, however, and told to come again. The injunction to depart was obeyed cheerfully upon their being told that it was cable day. A certain badge worn on the lapel of the coat, and certain tickets bearing certain signatures, acted as "open sesames." At 12 M., the Mayor's main office was well filled. The visitors were illustrious characters, and animated were their mutual greetings, the introductions and conversations. The Rev. Dr. FIELD, father of the chief hero of the day—occupied an arm chair by the side of Lord NAPIER. Although nearly seven decades of years have passed over the head of the venerated and honored clergyman, the glow of health is still perceptible upon his cheek, and a genial, wholesome look radiates from his countenance and undimmed eyes. He entered seal ously into conversation with Lord NAPIER. The representative of Her Majesty's Government responded with his wonted ease and freedom and as usual was amused with democratic plainness. Bishop HUGHES sat beside us with the Rev. Dr. MOTT, the venerable President of the Union College. The Bishop wore scarlet colored gloves, and upon the forefinger of his right hand was conspicuously visible his mammoth ruby ring, presented to him by the Pope at his ordination, and worn as the insignia of his office. The two conversed seemingly very pleasantly and harmoniously together. PETER COOPER, Esq., WILSON G. HUNT, Esq., and the Rev. Drs. ADAMS and SPRING formed a group by themselves. Professor BACHE, Superintendent of the United States Coast Survey, and Prof. HENDRICK, formerly of the North Carolina University, were busily chatting in one corner, and but a few feet from them stood, similarly engaged, Professors TORREY and WEBSTER. BENJAMIN H. FIELD, a brother of CYRUS, and JULIUS W. TIEMANN, a brother of Mayor TIEMANN, formed a talking duet. Mayor TIEMANN occupied his time in conversation with Mr. ARCHIBALD, British Consul at this port.

At a few minutes after 1 P. M., the visitors left the Mayor's office and entered the carriages in waiting in front of the Hall, to drive to the Battery, to wait the arrival of the Niagara. Ladies—the wives, sisters and cousins of the Aldermen and others holding office in the City Hall—now began to pour in after the departure of the visitors referred to above, and soon the windows were filled with eager female faces.

The Procession.

Perhaps the best coup d'œil, or bird's-eye view of the procession, along its entire line of march, was that from the windows of the TIMES Building. Thence the procession could be accurately described, and the appearance of almost every man examined as the whole mass swept into Printing House square, and round into the Park, underneath the arch which bore the motto, "The Path of FRANKLIN led to a FIELD of Enterprise."

It must be confessed that the extreme length of the procession made it somewhat unwieldy, and stoppages at intervals were rather tedious to lookers on. But these delays could not well be helped, and it is a matter of wonder how such an incongruous mass could have ever been so systematically arranged.

Long before the hour of two, at which time the procession ought to have appeared in the Park, every available spot for a sight was densely thronged with men, women, and children. But is was sometime after two o'clock that a body of Policemen, heralding the approach of the military, made their appearance. Then the crowd became enormous. People crushed forward, and pushed forward, and squeezed forward to obtain a view of the Policemen and a troop of Cavalry, which, as it proved afterwards, were only sent out as an advance guard to clear the way. The Police were active enough in thrusting persons back, and the Cavalry, after they had arrived opposite Tammany, charged backwards in the direction of that venerated building, to the great inconvenience and discomfiture of those persons whose propinquity to the horses' rumps was closer than they could have wished. The crowd hastily gave way before, or rather behind, the pressure, and in a few moments a considerable space was cleared, in which the approaching columns could conveniently wheel round into the Park. While the public were thus on the tip-toe of expectation, a melon-vender in the midst of the throng did not lose the opportunity of doing a most excellent business; and some forty or fifty melons, within a briefer time than it takes us to record the incident, were demolished on the spot.

Our citizen soldiers seldom, if ever, appeared to better advantage than they did yesterday. They all marched in full companies; and when all marched well, it would be invidious to make distinctions. The cavalry, infantry, and artillery, all turned out in full force, and the military part of the procession was at least an hour and a half in passing any given spot. While they came down Park Row, the carriages containing the guests of the city, and other distinguished persons, came by Nassau-street, and then filed into line between the First and the Fifth Regiments. In one of the carriages, drawn by six horses, was CYRUS W. FIELD, Esq., and his presence was always greeted with tremendous cheers by the crowd, directly it was known. Mr. FIELD was accompanied by Major TIEMANN. Following, in other carriages, were Lord NAPIER, the British Ambassador, Archbishop HUGHES, Captain HUDSON, of the Niagara, and his officers, Captain DAYMAN, of the Gorgon, and his officers, and a long string of vehicles in the rear that found it a difficult matter to make any progress up Broadway, so densely was that thoroughfare crowded. Between the cavalry and infantry of the Seventh Regiment marched the corps of Montreal Artillery who are on a visit to the City, and though they seemed rather warmly dressed for this latitude, they stepped out with perfect precision, and looked a most serviceable body of men. The Seventh Regiment itself was in its glory, and mustered some sixteen or seventeen Companies. It was during a momentary pause in the line of procession, and just after the 28th Regiment had passed by, that a cry of fire was raised. The City Hall bell, which had been lifted on a frame a few feet from the ground, was tolled with vivacity, and, in the direction of Chatham-square, a dense cloud of smoke was seen to arise. This diverted the attention of the crowd, and, as an engine at the moment came dashing through the Park, all who could tacked on to the "machine," and went off at the top of their speed. Another engine appeared in a moment after, and standing room became more comfortable as the crowd diminished. It was fully four o'clock before even the military part of the procession had passed into the Park; but it is time we should give some more minute description of their appearance as well as of the immense concourse of civic and other societies, professions and trades represented on this great occasion:

The procession started from the Battery at two o'clock, according to the programme, a most vigorous and praiseworthy instance of punctuality, which is quite novel to our processions as they are usually conducted. First, there was a detachment of sixty Policemen, walking two-abreast. Then came a troop of Cavalry as an escort to the Grand Marshal, Brigadier-General YATES. The Special Aids following, consisting of these gentlemen, General W. J. HOGAN, Captain JOHN CALHOUN, U. S. N.; Colonel H. P. MARTIN, Major GEORGE E. BALDWIN, JOHN L. ROME, General PAUL N. SPOFFORD, Colonel T. P. PEARL, Colonel EDWARD SAUNDERS, Major S. M. ARNOLD, and JAMES K. STRIKER. The military display was one of the most imposing ever witnessed in the City. The First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Tenth, Eleventh, Twelfth, Fifty fifth, Sixty-ninth, and Seventy-first Regiments, were out in full force, and conducted themselves finely. But the renowned Seventh, and the City Guard, were, all along the line, the glory of the procession, as far as its military character was concerned. Altogether, our citizen soldiery never appeared to greater advantage. They tried their best to be equal to the occasion, and succeeded. And their guests, of the Montreal Field Battery, were a marked feature in the procession, and were honored with loud and repeated cheers.

Owing to the immense crowd, which rendered the streets nearly impassable, the Second Division of the procession passed up Nassau-street to the Park, instead of proceeding by the direct route. After passing through the Park they went ahead of the military, in order to arrive at the Crystal Palace without the delay which would otherwise have occurred. This division was under the direction of Col. JOSEPH C. PUCKNEY, assisted by Col. MOSES E. CASTRO and RUFUS E CRANE. It consisted of the members of the Common Council, Mayor TIEMANN, and the hero of the day, Mr. CYRUS W. FIELD, his brother and the orator of the day, DAVID D. FIELD, Mr. PETER COOPER, with Captain HUDSON, of the Niagara, and Captain DAYMAN, of the Gorgon, the officers of the New-York, Newfoundland and Atlantic Telegraph Company, and the Mayor and Common Council of the cities of Brooklyn, Jersey City and Hoboken.

Among the military who closed in after the break in the procession, caused by this interference with the programme, the Irish regiment attracted great attention for its orderly appearance and fine discipline. Our Irish citizens are evidently rejoiced at the alliance of the United States and England, and went into the celebration yesterday like men heartily in earnest. The Germans also turned out magnificently, occupying nearly a mile of the procession, and carrying the rich satin banners of their respective societies and choruses. The 76 Company, and the Veterans of 1812, escorted by the Continentals, were greeted everywhere with cordial cheers.

The trades, after all, were the most attractive feature of the procession, to the right seers, in quest of novelty. The United States Express Company led the way, with a huge wagon, drawn by six splendid horses, decorated with red and white plumes, followed by another wagon, drawn by four horses Adams' Express drove their horses a tandem. Colgate & Co.'s Express turned out quite respectably Then came Adams' Express again, with a huge section of the cable coiled almost in a point, and thirty feet high at that, magnificently decorated with ribbons; the car, drawn by ten horses, being handsomely adorned with the flags of England and America. The crew of the Niagara followed, and were heartily, thunderously cheered during the whole procession. The American Telegraph Company were drawn by twelve horses, in another of Adams' Express wagons. An immense wagon, magnificently decorated, belonging to the St. David's Society, contained ten Minstrels, playing on Welch harps. At the end of the wagon was a model of the paying out machinery of the cable, while the English and American flags covered the entire vehicle in profusion.

The Scotch followed, with a unique emblem, a Royal Crown, composed of flowers, surmounted by a cap of Liberty, also composed of flowers, on a pole sixteen feet high, bearing the motto, "We are brethren." Six bag-pipers were in attendance.

Next came the Mercantile Section of Cadets of Temperance, from Brooklyn. Then the New-York Typographical Society, in a huge wagon, drawn by eight horses, with a printing press 100 years old at work. The wagon was stripped of its canopy by a crush in Nassau-street. But even in its dilapidation it excited much admiration, and drew forth loud applause.

The Randall's Island Boys followed, marching admirably, and eliciting shouts of applause.

Sewing Machines were next in order. First came WHEELER & WILSON'S, on a wagon, drawn by six horses, forming a handsome room, carpeted with Brussells, with a white canopy and pink sides, a gilt eagle surmounting the whole. Girls were at work at the Sewing Machines. CUMMINGS & CANFIELD, Pianoforte Manufacturers, had nine workmen operating on their instruments, in a carriage, drawn by six horses. Messrs. GILBERT & Co. also made a similar display.

BARTHOLF'S Sewing Machine was exhibited on a vehicle drawn by twelve horses, and bearing the inscription, "Triumph of Science—Song of the Shirt." A young girl sat sewing merrily with thread and needle in the old way, telling mutely, but unmistakably, the tale of the "Song of the Shirt." Behind her were hearty damsels, merrily working away at the sewing machine, while children in white frocks, and wreaths of flowers adorning their heads, scattered bills among the crowd.

Models of steam engines followed. Then a delegation of butchers on horseback, numbering nearly 700. A huge stuffed ox, labeled "Ox Washington,"—and said, when living, to have weighed 2,306 pounds,—drawn on a vehicle by four horses, was a notable feature. Afterwards followed a pen of sheep, on a wagon, drawn by six horses, with this inscription, "The fields of Agriculture pay homage to the FIELD of science."

A beautiful object in the procession was a miniature country market, containing living sheep, pigs, ponies, and an enormous dog to guard them,—the corners of the vehicle on which they were carried being decorated with huge shocks of corn.

HECKER & SONS, of the Croton Flour Mills, had eleven cars in the procession, representing the whole process of producing their flour, with a bag going to the grist-mill, as in the olden time. Then came a detachment of millmen, with cars filled with "Pure Milk."

The New-York Moulding and Planing Company had a vehicle, and a model of their machine.

Various lager-bier wagons followed, with jocose inscriptions, such as "Pure Bier and no Cocculus."

A patent life boat, from LANGMAN'S Gutta Percha Establishment, highly decorated with flags of all nations, was drawn on one of the National Express wagons.

BULLOCK, FARRAR & Co.'s coal-wagon, laden with American cannel coal, was drawn by fifteen horses, harnessed in line.

Mr. HERRING, Inventor and Proprietor of the Patent Safe, made a very fine show in the procession. The finest specimens of his manufacture, most ornately adorned, were exhibited on a handsome vehicle, beautifully ornamented, and drawn by four fine horses.

A curious feature was a huge wagon, belonging to Fairbanks' Scales and Mencely's Bells Company. A huge bell was kept ringing, by two men, who worked at it with a will.

But these were only a portion of the features of the procession, which excelled any procession which has taken place in this City since the Erie Canal Celebration and the Croton Water Festival, even if they surpassed it. It was full four miles in length, and drew forth more people to witness it, than unimaginative people thought that New York contained. As a

Epitome of the Atlantic Telegraph Celebration, it will never be forgotten by those who witnessed it.

At the Crystal Palace.

Long before noon on the day of the celebration of the arrival of the procession at the platform of the Crystal Palace, the streets were thronged with the curious, and the interior of the building presented several thousand of those who had been fortunate enough to secure tickets. There was nothing, however, to interest the spectators outside or inside the building. Those in the streets amused themselves with speculations as to the probable time the miserably-managed procession would arrive, and those in the building passed the time in informing each other where various objects of interest could be found, when the Palace was in its glory. It was not until after 3 o'clock that any official evidence of a demonstration was apparent. At about that time the New York Harmonic Society, with instrumental aids, arrived, and were conducted to an elevated position in the eastern portion of the transept. On their appearance they were greeted with applause by the people. Then another lapse of over an hour occurred during which there was an opportunity of observing minute matter of decorations there was, with one very desirable exception, no indication of the character of the demonstration about to take place. Nevertheless, there was plenty of room, and as every one present anticipated a treat in what was to take place in time was dispersed to gregarize or complain. [illegible] were dissatisfied. And in this connection, it strikes us exceedingly appropriate to suggest a repetition of the demonstration in which the people were so personally interested, should have been announced as coming who, to use a very mild phrase, were simply incompetent to its proper management. It was supposed that the demonstration was in the hands of a Committee of the Common Council; but just after Councilman Bunce had arranged the platform properly and appropriately for the occasion, and for all parties concerned, a Mr. LOWMAN (he of "Lowman claim" notoriety) appeared, and with an [illegible]

over-excited Aldermen, he was overruled, much to the aforesaid Alderman's subsequent regret. About this time, and in the midst of great excitement, Mr. CYRUS W. FIELD, Mr. EVERETT, Captain HUDSON, Captain DAYMAN, and the other prominent men in connection with the Atlantic Cable enterprise arrived and were conducted to the platform. As soon as the people were aware of their presence, three hearty cheers were given; and the immediate arrival of the 71st Regiment, in excellent order, and the fine effect of their evolutions and general appearance in the gallery, called the attention of the people from the bungling on the platform, and put them again in the best of humor. Before the military had concluded their manœuvres, Mayor TIEMAN, and Mayor POWELL of Brooklyn; Archbishop HUGHES, Dr. ADAMS, the Venerable Dr. MOTT, Mr. FIELD's father, Lord NAPIER, Mr. ARCHIBALD, the British Consul, and many others who were to take honorable part in the proceedings, arrived, and were conducted to places upon the platform. When the dignitaries had been seated, the crew of the Niagara entered from the west, with models of their vessel, and of the Agamemnon, and were received with

It is just a year since "the panic" began in Boston, and there is no much change in the times as a year ought to bring forth. The business that will return to property there this night have already returned to it, or certainly those that will not return to it are of little value to property there. Boston is becoming more independent of the lands of petty dukes and princes around her than she has been at any time since Hancock and Adams were in their graves. Almost every week brings us the report of some new mill or factory built, and in operation, in the country around us, and the golden harvest of the present year comes in upon us from the West with a fullness that has not been known for many years. Our manufactures are increasing in a ratio that is truly astonishing, and our commerce is extending with the increasing wealth of the country. The business of the approaching winter promises to be unusually active, and the amount of labor to be performed will be greater than ever before known. Money will be plenty, and the rate of interest will be low. Every man who wishes employment will find it, and every man who wishes to purchase property will find it cheap. Stocks will rise in value, and the whole community will be benefited by the general prosperity. Such are the prospects before us, and we have no doubt that they will be realized.

The Democratic State Convention will meet at Worcester, Sept. 2, next Tuesday. The list of delegates chosen embrace many influential and honorable names, and the Convention will be respectable and able. For some days past there has been a good deal of excitement here in regard to the Collectorship at Boston, and the friends of Gen. Butler stock is looking up, and the friends of Gen. Butler have been working vigorously. If he really desires the nomination, vigorously, he can have it. The truth is, he is accepted by the people as a candidate for the office, and if he should not become Collector well that event occurs, he will have to wait until the Democracy of Massachusetts have changed his opinions much during the last month. I know that he has said he did not wish for the Gubernatorial nomination, and that he would not accept it. While he desires the Collectorship, he would not be a candidate for the Governorship. Gov. Gardner took with him about 20,000 Fremonters, the best of the supporters being connected with the Democrats, whose best was Fillmore. No one else had the influence of Gov. Gardner, the Governor of the Telegraph, and the Democrats of Massachusetts, and the Democrats of New-York, and the Democrats of the Union generally, and the Democrats of the Telegraph, Cable from Europe to America; and that he need of our distinguished men side of the medal.

Great military achievements have been commemorated by medals; but here is a peaceful event more illustrious than any which was produced. In the Gardner : I venture to suggest to the Board of Trade, that under its auspices, an appropriate medal be struck, to commemorate the successful lying of the Telegraph Cable from Europe to America; and that the head of our distinguished Governor, the inventor of the Telegraph be placed on one side of the medal.

GENTLEMEN

A Double Execution.

WILLIAM WILLIAMS AND ABRAHAM COX, THE "ALMOST DOOMED," EXECUTED HUNG.

EARLY THIS MORNING, FRIDAY, Aug. 27, 1858.

Early this morning the people of the country surrounding this locality began to flock into Lewiston and Auburn to witness the terrible spectacle of the judicial homicide of two criminals. From the Lewiston side the people thronged in carriages across the toll bridge to Auburn, and on the court house side of the town, the gathering was so rapid towards the fatal spot. The gallows was erected early this morning. It is a plain and substantial structure, twelve feet square, with thirteen feet fall from the top of the drop to the ground. The trap-door or drop, is five feet and a half long by four and a half wide. The ropes were new, in Boston, specially for this occasion, and their diameter is as small as is consistent with their required strength. The ropes were so adjusted as to give the hanged persons a fall of about seven feet.

Yesterday I visited the jail and held a conversation with the prisoners. The negro, ABRAHAM COX, was quite cheerful and contented with his fate, and PETER WILLIAMS, the white man, was more than reconciled to the belief that his execution would be prevented by divine interposition. COX said that he knew he must die, and he would try to meet his doom like a man. He expresses, generally, an acknowledgment of guilt in the bloody affair, but when pressed upon the subject he caters into a justification of the act on the ground that he was cruelly treated. He is a medium sized man, 30 years old on the 25th of July last. He received his sentence of death on his sixty-eighth birthday.

WILLIAMS was eating an orange leisurely when I entered into conversation with him. He had several bouquets near his cell window, and entered very readily, almost eagerly, into conversation. His talk was a mixture of ignorance, fanaticism and insanity, although there was no raving about it. He said his age was 26 years. The conversation was as follows:

Reporter—How do you feel, to-day, Williams?

Williams—Oh, I feel very happy; (with animation) I never felt so happy in my life! The Lord Jesus Christ makes me feel happy! The Holy Ghost makes me feel happy!

Reporter—Do you feel as though you could meet your fate like a man?

Williams—Fate! What fate? The Lord Jesus Christ has washed away my fate. The Lord Jesus Christ has washed away my fate with his precious blood.

Reporter—Do you feel sorry for what you did on board the Alison Cooper?

Williams—I did feel sorry, but the Lord Jesus Christ has washed all my sorrows away.

Reporter—Do you hop for a pardon to-morrow?

Williams—The Lord God, he will pardon me. The Lord Jesus will pardon me.

Reporter—Then you believe that Jesus Christ will not let them hang you.

Williams—He will not let them; there is no power on earth to hang me; to hang me is to hang the Lamb of Jesus Christ; he hanged once and he can't suffer again. Oh, you shall see great things to-morrow! You shall see the greatest wonder of the world to-morrow.

Reporter—Which of you proposed the murder at first?

Williams—It was ABRAHAM (COX.) He was the first, and he can't sleep because he won't confess it. The Lord wouldn't let him sleep last night because he wouldn't own it.

Reporter—Who gave you these flowers?

Williams—MRS CLARK and some girls. (Immediately afterward.) The Lord God Almighty sends them all.

As I was about to leave the cell, WILLIAMS said: "Have you taken down what I have been saying?" I replied, "Yes." "Read over the last," said he. I complied, and he said: "That's right; and now I want you to put down something else. I want you to write that a little girl did teach me to the Lord. A very little girl. That little girl shall get a great blessing to-morrow. She shall be made the sister of the mother of the Lord Jesus Christ. She shall be exalted of all the world the sister of Mary Magdalene."

I asked him the name of the little girl and he told me. I asked him her age. "Oh," said he, "she is a very small little girl, about a year old—a little baby. She teach me to God. Look here, I have a bible in my hand; (exhibiting a small and very beautiful edition.) Bible is a present from the man-al who is to hang me. I shall give this bible to the little girl when I come out of the jail to-morrow. The Lord God shall send her mouth to-morrow, so that she shall read it to-morrow. Have you got all that down? (I replied in the affirmative.) "Well, write this down. A Roman Catholic Priest was come here to day, and the spirit of the Lord God told me to call him an hypocrite and I do."

"I cannot tell you more to-night but will more to-morrow. I have many things in my head to say, but the Lord tells me not to say more now."

Subsequently he repeated the whole of the 51st Psalm, which he had committed to memory entirely from hearing it read, he not being able to read a word of English.

The clergymen knelt with the prisoners, and Mr. ADAMS prayed most fervently and affectingly for them, for those who to-day to wash away the guilt of even those who have stained their hands in blood, to have mercy upon their souls. He also prayed that the officers might be blessed in the discharge of their duty, and the prisoners responded "Amen."

During the prayer ABRAHAM held his grey head meekly bowed down, while PETER looked upward toward heaven, his eyes glaring with an intense fire of devotion, his eyelids quivering, his under jaw working and his whole frame agitated with nervous excitement. After the prayer the negro sat down upon a cot by the side of Mr. ADAMS, and spoke to him very kindly, in a low tone of voice, in the meantime, while they waited for the awful summons to come. Prayer books were used and forwarded, with their head still elevated and his lips moving. The gilt Bible presented to him by the Marshal, was stuck in the waistband of his pantaloons, in front. ABRAHAM pointed to the Bible, and made some remarks to PETER in a low tone, but PETER shook his head and pointed upward.

Just as the tower clock was striking 11 the Marshal and his assistants entered the cell and placed the black caps upon the heads of the murderers. The Rev. Mr. BARKER took the arm of ABRAHAM, and the Rev. Mr. ADAMS that of PETER. They were preceded by the Marshal and his first Deputy, Mr. QUIMBY, and followed by two others, and so they walked forth from the prison to the scaffold to meet Death.

As soon as they were placed upon the drop PETER fell upon his knees, and for several minutes prayed frantically that the Lord Jesus would come down and show his power then and there, by delivering him. He acknowledged his guilt, but claimed pardon and deliverance on the ground that he had given his heart to Christ.

The Marshal then said: "ABRAHAM COX and PETER WILLIAMS, in obedience to the laws of the United States, it becomes my painful but imperative duty to execute you according to the warrant which I hold in my hand." He proceeded to read the warrant, which was issued by the highest judicial authority of the Union.

When the reading of the death-warrant was finished, WILLIAMS, who had remained on his knees, with his eyes elevated in religious frenzy, again broke out in another prayer, in the course of which he repeated most of the fifty-first Psalm, intermingled with his own incoherent language, elevating the Bible, occasionally, in front of him in an excited manner.

When this was finished the Marshal addressed ABRAHAM and asked him if he had anything to say before the sentence of the law should be executed upon him. He signified that his spiritual adviser and comforter, Mr. BARKER, who stood at his side, would read something from him. Mr. BARKER then read from a paper the last connected and dying speech of the unhappy man, which he had written at his dictation. In this speech COX acknowledged what he has never once before since his arrest, and what he denied to your reporter yesterday afternoon after the speech was prepared, viz: that he was the instigator of the murder. His story now corroborates the statements made by WILLIAMS from the beginning.

Marshal KIMBALL next asked WILLIAMS if he had anything further to say. He rose to his feet and uttered a few words. He said: "My friends, I have deserved to stand here a long time ago. I have been a very guilty sinner. I have killed them all. I killed all four of them myself. I hope the Lord Jesus Christ will pardon me and have mercy on my soul."

The clergymen now kneeled, and the Rev. Mr BARKER offered a fervent and appropriate prayer.

The Marshal and clergymen then shook hands with the doomed men, and bade them good bye, and then came the tying of the arms behind them and strapping the feet together. As Marshal KIMBALL was about to draw the black cap over the face of PETER, he signified that he wanted to say something, and repeated a brief prayer.

The caps were then drawn down over their heads, shutting out forever from their gaze the sea of human faces before them, and the sky above them. In a few minutes the noose was adjusted upon the throat of each, the attendants of the marshal stood back from the drop, and by a gentle touch of a spring with his foot the bodies fell, and all was over.

There was not a struggle, or a visible contraction of a muscle in either of the hanged murderers—the work of the ministers of the law had been perfect. In 10 minutes all the mechanical motion of the heart and arteries had ceased, and at 12 o'clock—25 minutes after the drop fell—the bodies were lowered into the coffins which had been placed under the gallows to receive them.

A medical examination disclosed that the neck of COX was broken by the fall, and that WILLIAMS died of strangulation.

At the moment when the drop fell there was a swaying to and fro of the crowd as if a universal shudder ran through the whole assembly. Some lingered long around, but the majority soon dispersed, satisfied, I is to be hoped, without desiring to witness another execution.

At the camp-meeting in Kennebunk, yesterday, the execution was made the subject of a discourse, commencing at 11 o'clock A. M. When the exhortation was finished the word was given to the brethren to engage in prayer for the souls of the two criminals then about to take flight from their mortal tenements. It is a coincidence sufficiently curious to those interested in such matters, that those prayers commenced at the exact moment when the drop fell and the Alison Cooper murderers were sent into eternity.

A Lovee Meeting was recently held in Tuntes County, Miss., for the purpose of taking into consideration the Lecos question of the Mississippi Valley; and that it was resolved to hold a Convention for the further consideration of the same subject in Vicksburg, on the Thursday preceding the first Monday in November next.

A Cool Request and an Icy Reply.

It will be recollected that the members of the Wisconsin Legislature last winter and sundry other persons were charged with having received from the La Crosse and Milwaukee Railroad Company a bribe in the shape of the bonds of that Company. As a direct sequel of the offence of said Company circulars were ordered to be issued to the holders of these bonds, requesting them to return the same. A gentleman by the name of Wooster, who received one of these circulars, replied to it as follows:

JANESVILLE, July 16, 1858.

SIR: Your kind favor of the 16th inst. informed me that a Committee had been appointed by the Board of Directors of the La Crosse and Milwaukee Railroad Company for the purpose of calling in the bonds familiarly known as the "Corruption Bonds" has been received. You trust that I will see the importance of immediately returning to the Company the bonds received by me.

In reply, permit me to say that, by the aid of my optics, I have as yet been unable to see the importance of returning the said bonds to the Company, although I am not near-sighted and have "looked."

I have however, Sir, to ask that you will defer any further action on the subject until I shall have received Lord Rosse's telescope; for which I have sent a special messenger this morning, and through which, when received, I will take another observation. Hoping that you will be able to refund your floating debt and pay your coupons, I remain yours in the "bonds," &c.

ISAAC WOODLE.

Obituary.

MRS. H. MARION STEPHENS, the well-know author, was died in East Hampden, Me., on Friday last, of consumption. She was the daughter of the Rev. John Atwell, and was born at Sidney, Me., July 3, 1826. In early life, she acted on the stage as "Miss Rosalie Somers." In fact, she married Richard Stephens, comedian, and soon after commenced her literary career, under the signature of "Marion Ward." In 1855, she left the stage and devoted herself entirely to her pen. She was the authoress of one novel Hope the Martyr, and of a great variety of tales, sketches and poems, a collection of which was once published, with the title of Home Scenes and Home Scenes. She also adapted for the stage Herbert's Marmaduke Wyvil and several of Dickens' stories.

The Athens (Ga.) Post learns that Sut Miller, the hero of the Lounging Papers, died suddenly in the neighborhood of Ducktown a week or two since. After having innumerable encounters with man and beast, he died ignobly at last from a blow inflicted by the fist of a fellow mortal.

JOHN H. W. HAWKINS, one of the original Washingtonian temperance men, and for many years a temperance lecturer, died suddenly at Parkersburg, Penn., on Thursday, of cholera morbus. He was about 60 years of age.

Miscellaneous.

A singular phenomenon of the sulphur water found about Carlisle, Pa., was discovered last week by Professor Wm. Corpenicus Wilson, of Dickinson College. The Professor having procured some sulphur water very highly impregnated, subjected it to an immense pressure in the Brass Magdenburg hemispheres until two-thirds of the water contained had exuded from between the pores of the metal and where the cups are joined together. When the cups were unscrewed the remainder of the water had an exceedingly strong odor of sulphur, reminding one forcibly of Milton's Tartarus, and on the Professor applying a match, the flame instantaneously communicated to the water and burnt, something like ether, for about four minutes, emitting a very sulphurous odor while burning. It has always been the common opinion that no water could contain such combustible properties in so high a degree, but the above experiment by the Professor fully demonstrates the fallacy of the opinion.

Mayor Stith, of New Orleans, has addressed a special message to the City Councils on the subject of yellow fever. He says: "Several vessels from German ports, having many emigrants on board, have now been so long at sea that at any hour their arrival may reasonably be expected in our river. It is the dictate both of humanity and prudence to prevent so large a body of unacclimated strangers from entering the city during the prevalence of the present epidemic. To them our atmosphere would prove fatal, and the increase of mortality that might ensue would seriously aggravate the sickness and distress now existing. I would suggest the all emigrants, who may arrive before the city has regained its normal state of health, be dis harged at the quarantine station, and that an appropriation be made to send immediately up the river from that point all who have not the means of paying their passage—due discretion being exercised in the disbursement of money by the officer to whom you may intrust that duty."

The Colonel Wade will case is in the Court at Boston. The Traveller says: At the last hearing of this case, the matter was continued. Judge ABBOTT and the Hon. B. F. Butler have been engaged for the Will, and J. M. Randall, Esq., of Boston, assisted by Mr. Richardson, of Lowell, in the counsel for the heirs. In addition to this arrangement, Hon Rufus Choate and Judge Hoar are retained for the heirs. One of the chief grounds of the suit rests upon the fact that the Will is in the hand writing of the largest legatee under its provisions, (Mr. Converse, of Woburn.) The case will be a very important one, and must especially interest the trustees of the benevolent and charitable institutions. The Will, it will be remembered, donates money to the Female Medical and Tufts Universalist Colleges.

The Postmaster-General, Brown, has directed the contractor for the great overland mail route to California to run as follows: From St. Louis, Mo., by way of Springfield, Mo., Fayetteville, Ark., Fort Belknap, Texas, Franklin and Fort Yuma, Cal., to San Francisco. Also, from Memphis, Tenn., via Little Rock to Fort Smith, connecting at the latter place with the above-mentioned route—the contractors to include such other offices as may be designated from time to time by the Department. This important arrangement will commence about the 15th of September.

The Litchfield (Conn.) Bank has been closed by Judge Ellsworth, on application of the Commissioners. The circulation of the bank in the hands of the people is less than $20,000—it has been nearly $60,000. The circumstances of the case are not to be stated until the hearing of the application for a perpetual injunction.

Mrs. Monroe, of Houston, Texas, charged with poisoning Miss Abby Gilbendy, a niece of her husband, has been bound over in the sum of $5,000 to appear before the District Court and answer to the charge. Mr. Monroe has also been arrested.

Christian Jacobi, the murderer of the unknown woman, whose body was found near Pittsburg some weeks ago, has been arrested and returned to Pittsburg. He was caught in Indianapolis.

Crops in Europe.

From the Mark Lane Express, Aug. 16.

Another week's fine weather (though with occasional thunder-showers) has enabled farmers to secure most of their Wheat in excellent condition. The diversity, however, of the yield and quality is as remarkable as the season. It appears the weight of white Wheat, where it was blighted, does not exceed 47 lbs. ₱ bushel, and is only fit for chicken-food; while the strong lands, in favored localities, produce samples weighing 60 lbs. ₱ bushel. Whatever the average may reach, it must therefore be much below last year. Red descriptions are far more equal, and have given a fair result in the very same field where white has almost entirely failed. At seon, therefore, will be given to growers as to the best dependence. It is singular that the yield presents the same inequalities in France; and we fear we may calculate that other countries will not fare much better. Harvest-work having been general, the markets have been thin, and millers have had an opportunity to buy even old samples on rather more favorable terms. At the same time the greater plenty of the new, in consequence of the relatively high rates that were paid for the first samples, has brought it more to a parity with old. The weather has thus far been propitious, and the importance of this fact can hardly be over-estimated when the rate of consumption is considered, through the increase of population. France and the near countries of the continent exhibit some reaction, especially Belgium, where most excitement obtained. Less favorable accounts of the produce in Russia have been reported; and it is certain that in Russia there have been desolating floods. So that, as a whole, this country, though somewhat deficient, stands foremost—especially Scotland and Ireland, where more humid climates have lessened the effect of drought. Potatoes continue most promising.

Boots and Shoes.

This branch of trade continues to exhibit a fair degree of activity. The demand from the South and Southwest is good, and there is an improved inquiry from some of the less remote Western States. Supplies of common and medium qualities of work are generally ample, while the finer styles are not as plenty as they are wanted; and for these holders obtain very full rates. Howes, Hyatt & Co. in their circular remark of New-York, as a Boot and Shoe market: "New-York, in the Boot and Shoe trade, like all other domestic trade, is becoming more and more the centre, and the time is not far distant when such an idea as going to any other market for a supply of Boots and Shoes will be perfectly ridiculous, as most of the hides and sole leather that Boots and Shoes are made from have to come from this market. Boots and Shoes can no bought at less prices, and better assorted stocks can be had here than in any other market. This has emphatically become the head-quarters for the manufactured goods as well as the raw material." In Boston, large orders from seaboard markets, as well as from the South, have contributed to keep up the activity in the trade, previously referred to. Prices, however, have not varied much. The demand for California is moderate. The Boston Shipping List reports no clearances for San Francisco the past week, but mentions among the exports thence, 29 cases to Australia, and 84 cases to Port Townsend, W. T., the first direct shipment to that market. The quantity cleared at the Boston Custom-House, has been as follows:

FARMERS' CLUB.

Tea—Cheese—Rust on Seed—Tomatoes to Gold Climaxes—What Vegetables Can be Most Profitably Raised for the New-York Market.

The Farmers' Club met yesterday at the Rooms of the American Institute, at 12 o'clock. Mr LAWSON was called to the chair. Among the extracts from foreign journals of horticulture, Judge MILLS read an extract from the Revue Horticole an item touching green teas, to the effect that its cultivation was not difficult, that it could be multiplied from the seed which must be sown as (soon as they are ripe; that it flowers in September. The Bohea and Green teas, says the writer, are not (as is generally supposed) varieties of the same plant. The green (Thea Viridis) has larger leaves and recurved edges to them. The flowers are less numerous, and are solitary, and they appear a month earlier than on the Bohea. From these two plants are manufactured all the teas of commerce. The Chinese count 35 different kinds; but their distinctions beyond these two are made in the difference of their treatment.

Mr. ROBINSON read part of a paper detailing JESSE CARPENTER'S (of Elmira) process of butter making, but the manuscript being rather tough, though the matter was good, it was agreed to file the document unread for publication.

Mr. FARRER read an inquiry from a correspondent in Tyre, Seneca County, as to any connection between Canada thistle and chess. A field which had been overrun with thistles last year, he had mowed, and this year not a thistle was to be seen, but an abundance of chess. The answer suggested was that thistles were killed by mowing them at precisely the right time, though no one could say exactly what the right time was—the chess was, probably, there in seed before.

Mr. FULLER told of two acres, near Milwaukee, (Wis.,) sow ed in oats, which, the first year, gave a fine crop of oats, and the next year an abundant crop of chess.

Mr. ROBINSON told of a field which he had sown with wheat to get a preemption claim in Illinois, many miles from where the land had ever been plowed. He raised no wheat, but a splendid crop of chess; yet he knew that botanists say, that the conversion of wheat into chess is a physiological impossibility.

Professor MORRIS had been reading that some of the oats of the West were badly rusted, and that the cattle and horses turned on to the field were killed by it—that microscopical examination showed that this rust was composed of exceedingly minute animals. He remarked that in Russia they raised excellent peaches, according to accounts; but, to do it, they cut back the young tree to two buds, and during the Winter laid down the shoots, covering them with soil or sand, and in the Spring trained them against a northern wall.

Mr. FARRER had noticed that the best flavored and finest peaches he had ever seen were from Canada. A Crawford's Early, which never gets over ten inches in circumference here, he had seen over 14 inches in circumference, raised in Canada; and as we go South the flavor of all our peaches deteriorates. Hothouse peaches were almost tasteless. He thought we should take the Russian hint—prune our peaches—prune off half the new growth, and try the effect of layering them during the Winter.

Prof. MAPES said that it might not hurt the peach to bury its branches very late in the Fall, if we take them up again very early in the Spring; but it must be remembered, if any branch of the peach is bent below a horizontal line, all below that line ceases to grow.

It being 1 o'clock, the regular topic of the day was next considered—"The best variety of vegetables for the New-York market." "You know," said Judge MILLS, "those who are posted tell us that we must not raise wheat near New-York." "We can't afford it," added the Chairman.

Professor MAPES said, so many circumstances are to be considered that are peculiar to individuals, that it is scarcely possible to lay down a general rule on this subject. There are some shelly fields near the City where one crop can be raised year after year without deteriorating the soil or a lack of profit. But as a general thing, there must be an alternation of crops. On my own place, if I raise turnips this year and cabbages next, the cabbages will be clump rooted. As to the succession of crops, we need not be very particular concerning the order if only the succession is secured. We cannot raise certain crops upon fields manured with the highly nitrogenized manures. If we use hog-pen manure, our cauliflowers will butt; our cabbages, turnips, &c., will disappoint us, if these kinds of manure have been freely used within four years. Some think they make most by getting several crops from the same piece during the season; they plant early potatoes on hills; when in full vigor they set out cabbage plants, which furnish the potatoes both moisture and shade. Digging the potatoes is the most thorough cultivation of the cabbages. The potatoes off, they put in rows of the ruta-baga and lettuce. This may be desirable where men are paying fifty dollars a year rent, per acre—where the land is very dear, but not generally then, even. We cannot compete with the West in their staples—we cannot afford to raise corn, even at 110 bushels to the acre. We must raise articles whose bulk or low value hinders the transmission from different points. Beets, 1,200 bushels to the acre, and parsnips 1,500 bushels to the acre are profitable. The market gardener keeps pulling and bunching his parsnips from the earliest of the season, and the market stands a very large supply of them. If it were so with all the vegetables that he can profitably raise, ten acres in egg plants would make a man rich in a few years. But, egg-plants are in very small demand, while beets are never too plenty. As to beets, the smooth long-blood is a very miserable, though a very popular variety. They call it the "quaker," the "shaker," or the "lazy man's beet," because it stands so high that it can be pulled without stooping. It has a beautiful color, has concentric layers, and looks beautifully on the table, but is woody and comparatively tasteless. It is very inferior to the long-blood, the turnip-rooted, and especially to the Bassano, with its alternate rings of red and white, and layers that are not concentric. No yellow beet is fine for the table.

Of parsnips, he never could raise a large crop, unless the land was subsoiled and underdrained. When so treated, of course they need less manure. To harvest them he runs the lifting subsoil plough, inserted 19 inches between the rows, which leaves them in good condition to be lifted out by the tops.

Of tomatoes he recommended to cut off the tops as soon as fruit enough has set. This will ripen the fruit ten days earlier than it would be otherwise.

The Lima bean, that runs 15 feet nigh, is a humbug. It is to be planted in deep soil and well fertilized with Peruvian guano, if possible, and when it is five feet and a half high, pinch off the terminal buds. It is not fair to ask a gill of sap to go through 40 feet of vine to make beans. To start the plant early he proposed that the bean be planted, the smallest end lowest, in a box of inverted sod very early, the box to be kept in the cellar till it will do to expose it; then take out the sods with the young plant growing on them, and plant around poles.

Carrots are an excellent crop. They are easily grown and are always salable, averaging 37½ cents per bushel in our market. Mix the seed with one-tenth its weight of radish-seed. On being sown, the radishes come up before the carrots, thus marking the rows so that they can be kept clear of weeds from the very first. When the radishes are large enough, pulling them for market will be the best cultivation of the carrots. If not wanted for market, passing a roller over the rows kills the radish, which furnishes fine manure for the carrot.

To raise melons, be sure that the vines of no two hills cross each other. When the third rough leaf appears, pinch off the first runner bud, treating the branches in the same way. This keeps the vines close about the hill and makes them good bearers. To have loosened the earth under the hill, down 3 or 4 feet deep, even, tells wonderfully upon the fruitfulness of the vine. The same treatment in all respects is wanted for cucumbers, squashes, and all that tribe.

Potatoes are certainly not as likely to rot upon subsoil and underdrained land as elsewhere. This statement, the Professor illustrated by many curious facts, showing that the rot had been bounded by the underdrained fields. Indeed if he were to start farmer to-morrow without the capital to underdrain and subsoil plough his farm, he should prefer to turn to anything else for a living. Underdrained land never suffers from the drought, but the drain must be built open at both ends and not diagonally to the slope of the field.

In answer to a question by a lady, as to when blackberries should be pruned? Mr. LAWTON answered—In the Spring, and before the buds put forth. He cut back the last year's growth of wood one-fourth of one-third. He would cut away all but two or three shoots in a hill, and then prune but little or none afterwards.

The Club adjourned till Monday next, when the Flowers of the Season will be the subject of remark. There were some very fine specimens of flowers on

NEW-YORK LIVE STOCK MARKET.

Prepared every week, expressly for the New-York Times, Semi-Weekly, and Weekly Times, by a careful and experienced Reporter.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, Sept. 1, 1858.

The principal Market Places are

WASHINGTON DROVE-YARDS, 44TH-STREET, Browning's, on Sixth-street; CHAMBERLIN'S, on Robinson-street; and O'BRIEN'S, on Sixth-street. Our reporters refer to these regular markets. Irregular sales are sometimes made at Bergen Hill, N. J., and from the Hudson River Boats.

The great sales day at the Washington Yards is on WEDNESDAY of each week. The reports from all the yards are made up for the preceding week to the evening of that day.

Beeves are sold by the estimated dead weight of the four quarters; the so-called "fifth quarter" (hide and tallow) is not reckoned in here as it is in Boston and some other cities. When cattle are weighed or estimated alive, the dead weight is reckoned at a certain number of pounds to the 100 lbs. of live weight, as agreed upon. The general rule in this market for medium cattle is 56 lbs. to the 100; 44 lbs. being allowed for the "fifth quarter" and offal.

The average prices to-day, as compared with last week, are about ½c. lower.

We quote:

At BROWNING'S, CHAMBERLIN'S and O'BRIEN'S prices do not materially differ from those at Forty-fourth-street. BROWNING reports beeves at 7c.@9c. CHAMBERLIN reports Beeves at 6½c.@9c. O'BRIEN reports Beeves at 7c.@9c.

REMARKS ON THE BEEF MARKET.

Even the cattle (or their owners) seemed to have determined to honor the great Telegraphic celebration to-day. At least a greater number of large fat bullocks arrived in this City for to-day's market than on any previous week for some years past. The numbers foot up 5,040, which is nearly equal to 5,500, or even 6,000 of such bullocks as we often find here..... The butchers resolved to take part in the procession this P. M., and did so in a body, dressed in their white aprons, and a fine appearance they made. To be ready for this, they made most of their purchases at 44th-street yesterday, though knowingly paying higher rates than prevailed to-day. This made a lively Tuesday's market, and about as many cattle were sold as to-day. The prices were 8½c.@9c. for good bullocks last evening, and 8c.@8¼c. to-day..... The market was quite brisk on the first opening this morning, but the buyers soon thinned out, and by noon there were few to be seen, though there were plenty of unsold cattle..... The majority of all the animals were of good quality, though a few lots of "lean kine" could be found by those who make it a point to pay only 6c. for tendons and bone..... With those here still unsold, and some hundreds more at Albany and elsewhere there is a partial supply on hand for next week..... The trade at Albany has been somewhat brisk, about 1,000 head going East from that point this week..... We give in the following table, the description, owners, sellers, &c., of the principal lots offered at Forty-fourth-street, and in the succeeding special notes some items respecting quality of individual lots, sales, &c., which will aid the distant reader in forming a fair opinion of the general character of to-day's transactions. These tables, &c., are condensed from copious notes made during a personal examination of the yards, continued through the entire day:

And numerous smaller lots.

A. WARNER forwarded 62 pretty fair Cattle from Ross County, Ohio, which MEAD & HOLCOMB were selling at 8¾c., and for the top 9c. was obtained yesterday.

MEAD & HOLCOMB sold in addition 45 very good Kentucky Cattle for P. HUNT, at an average of about 8¾c. on 8¼ cwt. Also, for E. J. WARNER, 36 common light Cattle at $48 ₱ head, or 8c. ₱ lb.

R. MURRAY, for ALEXANDER & VIRGIN, 61 Illinois Cattle of similar quality to those sold last week at 8¼c @ 9c. ₱ lb., or ½c. less than was then obtained.

W. H. BALDEN, for Dutchess County farmers, 30 good Cattle, the top at 9c., and so down to about 8½c. Also, 30 Columbia County Cattle of fair quality at 7c @ 9c., and 30 Pennsylvania Cattle for T. STRICKLAND at 7c.

ALLERTON & CONGER, for A. M. ALLERTON, Jr., 95 fair Illinois Steers, rated 7 cwt., at 8c.@9c. Also, 64 Illinois Cattle for S. MCKEE, at 7¾c.@9c.

HOAG & SHERMAN, for J. BRYANT, 80 very good Ohio cattle, of 8 cwt., at 8c @9c., and 42 State cattle of fine quality for Dutchess County, for 8¾c.@9c. The 9c. cattle were all sold yesterday.

R. SUMNER brought in 77 good bullocks from Bourbon Co., Ky., at an expense of $16 ₱ car, on the Kentucky Central Road; $20 from Cincinnati to Buffalo; $70 on the New-York Central Road to Albany, and 25c. ₱ head on the Hudson River Road, making about $11 50 ₱ head from Kentucky here, which is a heavy expense for the distance.

Van & Co. were selling them at 8¾@9c. ₱ lb., 9¾ cwt.

Illinois stock, at 9c. on 8¾ cwt. They were all sold yesterday.

ALLERTON & CONGER, for White & Son, 90 very common light cattle from Iowa, at 8c. @ 9c. ₱ lb. Also, for J. HEGLER, 38 very fair cattle of HEGLER'S own feeding, in Fayette County, Ohio. Home weight 1,300 lbs. net, and bringing about 8½c.

MILCH COWS AND CALVES.

Milch Cows are sold at each at the above yards, averaging pretty fair demand for the week. The prices range somewhat with the supply and demand, and vary greatly, of course, upon the milking value. The purchaser judges for the buyer has also considerable to do with the price. Most unfortunately a Cow is sold at $20@$45, or even $150. The general prices through out the year for ordinary Cows is $31 to $45, or $36. Quite a number sell above $45, and more, perhaps, below $30. We often see apologies for Cows as at $20@$35. The weekly reports from the different yards will give the weekly fluctuations.

Receipts continue larger than the present City wants, and business is dull. Good Cows are still worth more in the country than here.
